ActiveSpeed is compatible with...

All browsers, including Microsoft Internet Explorer, Netscape, Firefox, and others. ActiveSpeed is also fully compatible with Windows 95, 98, Me, NT, 2000, and XP!

Those settings guarantee you neither an extremely slow or extremely fast Internet connection...just a boring, middle of the road one.

But to take full advantage of everything the internet can offer you—from increased work-related productivity to maximum fun and entertainment—your computer's connection settings need to be adjusted (fine-tuned) for optimum speed, performance and enjoyment (unless you enjoy surfing the web in slow motion).

“The difference was outstanding! I was on dial-up, the increase, well it has to be seen to be believed, and now that I am on broadband, the software still gives me the edge with performance.”

-- Dennis Webber, Cornwall, UK

ActiveSpeed corrects and accelerates your Internet connection...

Your usage patterns (the websites you visit and the files you download) and the connection you use (broadband or dial-up) and the hardware you install (cameras, routers, VOIP, etc.) creates an ever-increasing drag on your internet connection speed.

[Insert as sidebar]

“I was able to download, and operated anywhere between 49-51Kps with using dial-up. Before I installed ActiveSpeed, I was operating at about 38-40Kps. So to me, since I do all my work on the computer, the added speed tremendously enhanced my ability to perform my job.”

Don't be fooled by band-aid fixes!

The Web is flush with software products that act as "Internet boosters", which rely on simple caching technology (they only improve the loading of frequently-visited pages).

They don't increase overall Internet speed.

They don't improve frustratingly slow online gaming, they don't speed-up access to websites you've never visited before—and they don't eliminate annoyingly long download times of pictures, videos, music or emails...
